FEI / BS Safety Cup & Breakaway Plate

This safety cup is FEI approved With effect from 1st April 2005 the BSJA ruling made it mandatory in the show jumping arena to use the FEI approved safety cups as support for the back poles of spread obstacles and in case of triple-bar to support the centre and back poles of obstacles. This applies to Pony Club Open area and above competitions. The Pony Club also recommends that branches use FEI safety cups at all levels and consider investing in these cups when updating their showjumps. BHS Approved Riding Schools are also required to abide by these rules.

It is the breakaway plate that makes any jump cup comply with the rules.

Here are a few simple FAQ to help you decide what you need:

Q1. I am buying a new set of BSJA specification Showjumps how is the best way to comply to the FEI cup requirements? A1. The best way is to have all your new wings FEI fitted with the keyhole strips, that way you can use any of the fences for spread jumps and you don't have the added complication of having a mixture of traditional and FEI cups.

Q2. I am thinking of holding BSJA competitions in the future should I go for the FEI system now or save money and stick to traditional cups? A2. If you can afford to I would go for the FEI system however if this is over your budget I would choose BSJA spec wings but with traditional cups, then you can always change to the FEI system in the future.

Q3. We are a Club and have an existing set of wings and now want the FEI safety system fitted what are our choices? A3. If they have a upright thickness of 2 1/4 " you can fit them with FEI keyhole tracking. If their upright thickness is less than 2 1/4 " Key hole tracking is not an option as it will be wider than your upright.
